* Editing Tools The most common tool in Photoshop is the Paint Bucket tool. You can edit and create new layers using this tool. It's great for spreading out colors and creating gradients. If you want to quickly edit a layer, the Eraser tool is a good alternative. The Pen tool provides very precise control over the pixels on the canvas and enables you to draw images and apply filters without any intermediate saving of file information. You can use the Brush tool for drawing and painting and the Pencil tool for creating pens and brushes. Both the Eyedropper tool and the Magic Wand tool are extremely useful and quick-to-use. The Eyedropper tool enables you to sample colors from an image and is used for sampling colors from an image to apply as a layer or to paint with. The Magic Wand tool makes it easy to select edges quickly and predictably by using the polygonal selection method. The Zoom tool allows you to access any part of an image. You can zoom in to see details that you may not have otherwise noticed, or zoom out to see the overall composition of an image. The Canvas Size tool can be used to resize a canvas, and the Rectangular Selection tool is helpful when you want to quickly make precise selections. Much like most page layout programs, Photoshop has a Move tool, a Selection tool, and a Zoom tool. You can also copy, paste, and duplicate layers, as well as perform several other basic operations. Layers are the basis of all editing, and they give you a lot of control over the appearance of an image. In this section, I explain the layers and how you create and manipulate them. * Mixing Colors and Shades Layers are simply a collection of tools for altering individual colors. In the following figure, I've created a new layer and selected a black and white pencil shape, which I then filled with a color that will create a shadow in an image. As you can see in Figure 16-1, you can create and manipulate new layers to create different looks and effects. You can move, copy, and manipulate them as much as you like. Be careful not to accidentally delete a layer. You can use the Color Picker tool (the small colored rectangle in the middle of the Layers palette) to change the color of an individual layer. You can select the color in the Color Picker, and the color of the layer will change

All quotes from this article come from the official Adobe website. Basic image editing Image editing is when you apply one or more adjustments to an image. The word adjustment has become common to use instead of filter. The image filter term has no effect on the image data. The adjustments are changes to the settings of your image. They are applied to the colour, light and shape of your image. You can choose to apply many adjustments together for an effect that is more powerful than simply using one adjustment. Most adjustments work on the whole image or on specific areas of the image. You can apply them to the whole image, or to a specific area. You can change the size and the position of the specific area that you edit. The most basic image adjustments are: It is always best to apply only one adjustment at a time as you can see how each adjustment affects the image. For example, when you use a colour balance adjustment then the other adjustments have to become black and white before you can see the effect of the adjustment. Adjustments can make your image look better and make it less or more colourful. They can also reduce the contrast of your image. Colour balance The colour balance is a way to make your image look more colourful. The colours of your image depend on your camera, computer and printer. You can increase the amount of colour in your image by increasing the amount of red, green and blue it has. This makes your image more colourful. To change the colour balance of an image: Open your image. Click on the Photo icon in the top toolbar. Click on the Adjust Colour button (see image below). Choose a colour range that you want to balance the colours of your image. An example of a colour range is: [Red: 0%, Green: 0%, Blue: 0% Yellow: 100%, Purple: 100%, Magenta: 100%, Cyan: 100%]. You can choose any colour from the histogram (see image below). A colour range is a combination of colours on the CIE-lab colour wheel. The most common range is RGB (Red, Green and Blue), but other colour ranges are also used. In the image below, I have chosen a colour range of: Red: 0%, Green: 0%, Blue: 0% 05a79cecff

Q: How can I dynamically filter search results in an Access database using a combo box? I have an Access database containing images. When a form is first opened the user selects a few categories using a listbox, then clicks on the Go button to search the database for pictures fitting these selection criteria. The problem is that the program can't filter the results based on the categories chosen. When the form is closed and reopened the results are no longer filtered. I need to somehow remember what categories were selected and use them to filter the results. Here is my code: Private Sub Submit_Click() DoCmd.OpenQuery "SearchForm" 'Filter the results Dim sSQL As String Dim db As DAO.Database Dim qdf As DAO.QueryDef sSQL = "SELECT ([List1]) [File No.] " & _ "FROM [Database] " & _ "WHERE (([List1] In (" & Me.CategoryID & ")));" Set db = CurrentDb Set qdf = db.QueryDefs("SearchForm") Me.ListBox1.Column(0) = "Display" Me.ListBox1.Column(1) = "Description" Me.ListBox1.Column(2) = "File No." qdf.SQL = sSQL Me.ListBox1.RowSource = qdf.SQL Me.ListBox1.RowSourceType = dbUseSystemKind Me.ListBox1.Requery Me.Close End Sub A: Just some steps that I'd take to tackle the problem: Declare a global variable (for that matter a list of variables). Say a: Dim pCategoryID As Integer A simple enum type will do. If it has a default value, add that, but all enum values should be passed into the constructor of the enum type. So: Public pCategoryID As Integer Public Sub CategoryIDEnum(pCategoryID As Integer) pCategoryID = pCategoryID End
